

GEOGRAPHY › ENVIRONMENT › JUSTICE

Some neighborhoods, communities, and regions receive direct benefits, such as energy, trash collection, jobs, and tax revenues, from industrial production and commercial activities while the costs and burdens of air and water pollution, habitat degradation, property devaluation, and reduced quality of life are sent elsewhere.

Globally, prolonged droughts and intensified flooding caused by climate change affect developing countries more than developed ones.

photos: Paul Falardeau, Andrew Heavens (flickr/Creative Commons)

UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST
MINISTRY FOR EARTH

503-595-9392 • office@uuministryforearth.org • www.uuministryforearth.org UU Ministry for Earth is a 501(c)(3) organization